Statement of Interest (Do not include personal information such as phone numbers, addresses, emails, etc.)

As a health economist, I am passionate about ways I can contribute to public health and the well-being of those around me. I electively teach a health economics class at a local university, and also serve as a health advocate toward policy in my day job. This gives me a good grasp on policy analysis, policy considerations, as well as the politics of how to make it happen. In my past experience serving on similar cross-cutting teams and boards, my greatest contributions have been (a) my organization skills, where I make sure to be prepared prior to meetings and help identify gaps, (b) developing and leveraging connections between us and other stakeholders, such as other boards or local organizations, and (c) a high level of energy and enthusiasm for my local community. I tend to be a highly engaged resident – always at an event and finding ways to organize, whether it's a Facebook group, community resource, or local event. What I also feel could be helpful to the committee is having a sense of where public health in Alexandria should go, and volunteering proactively to both suggest and implement agreed on steps to get there.

Statement of Interest (Do not include personal information such as phone numbers, addresses, emails, etc.)

As a longtime member of the Alexandria community, I have seen firsthand how critical strong public health systems are—especially during the COVID-19 pandemic. Drawing on my professional background in public health and biological containment, I supported my children's school and advised on disease-mitigation strategies during that period. I am now eager to bring that same expertise to the broader community. Serving on the Alexandria Commission on Public Health would allow me to contribute informed, evidence-based perspectives to support the City's efforts to protect and promote the health of all residents.

Summary of Work and Experience

I bring more than a decade of experience in public health, global health security, and biological threat preparedness across the U.S. government, international health systems, and the nonprofit sector. My career has centered on strengthening health systems, advancing disease-prevention strategies, and improving community resilience to infectious disease threats. I have served in senior public health and biodefense leadership roles at the White House National Security Council, U.S. Department of Defense, and U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, where I advised top federal leaders—including the National Security Advisor and the HHS Secretary—on emerging public health threats, disease transmission risks, and biological incident preparedness. In these positions, I coordinated national-level public health strategies, implemented cross-agency biodefense policies, and oversaw programs that improved laboratory safety, community preparedness, and health-system response capacity. [REDACTED] Earlier in my career at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, I led programs focused on biosafety, infectious disease risk reduction, and global health capacity building. I provided technical assistance to numerous countries to help them strengthen national biosafety regulations, improve public health laboratory systems, and develop oversight mechanisms for high-risk biological agents. [REDACTED] My work has consistently centered on designing practical, evidence-based public health policies, implementing community-focused preparedness programs, and coordinating diverse partners—from local health entities to international organizations—to safeguard population health. I have managed large, multi-sector public health programs, built partnerships with state and local stakeholders, and contributed to national strategies that advance equitable access to health protection and emergency response resources. I now serve as a Vice President at the API Innovation Center, where I lead teams developing data analytics and AI tools that accelerate public health research and improve health outcomes for communities. [REDACTED] Across all roles, I have been committed to strengthening public health systems, improving community readiness, and ensuring that policies reflect the on-the-ground realities of disease transmission, prevention, and health equity.

Statement of Interest (Do not include personal information such as phone numbers, addresses, emails, etc.)

Statement of Interest City of Alexandria Public Health Advisory Commission William H. Hall Dear Mayor Gaskins and City Council Members, One of the most important elements of a community is the health and well-being of its citizens. But a healthy community is not built solely on an individual's personal health, but also more broadly on social, environmental and economic factors that play a key role in the overall health of a community. I recently retired from a 43-year career with the federal U.S. Department of Health and Human Services as the senior career official responsible for coordinating strategic communications and outreach on the broad array of public health issues impacting constituencies at national, state, local and tribal levels across the nation. My work regularly involved working with state and local health departments, which gave me insight into the unique public health needs of local communities. Although originally from Baltimore, I have been a resident of the City of Alexandria for 31 years and have long considered Alexandria home. I am passionate about public health, and I am equally passionate in seeing Alexandria be a community where all residents can access affordable health care, enjoy the gift of good health, and have the community support they need to build meaningful lives in our community. I am enthusiastic about the opportunity to serve on the City's Public Health Advisory Commission. My lifelong experiences in field of public health motivates me to actively participate on the commission in shaping local health policies and programs that are equitable, innovative, and responsive to the needs of all of Alexandria's residents.

Statement of Interest (Do not include personal information such as phone numbers, addresses, emails, etc.)

Dear Mayor Gaskins and Members of the Alexandria City Council, I am writing to express my strong, continued interest in serving as a citizen representative on the Public Health Advisory Commission (PHAC). I believe a robust public health strategy is essential for our thriving community, as it is the cornerstone of a successful city. It is the foundation for the overall well-being and success of its residents. By prioritizing public health, from our newborns to our senior citizens, we can strengthen our economy through a productive workforce, improve the outcomes of students in our school systems, and improve the lives of all Alexandrians. Together, these wins benefit our city. Currently, I serve as Vice President of Policy and Government Relations at the National Alliance for Care at Home, located in Old Town Alexandria, where I guide strategy on federal healthcare policies that affect our city and the nation. I meet with Administration officials and Congressional leaders to advocate for policies that expand access to quality hospice and palliative care. Additionally, I serve as a resource to our members, keeping them informed about the latest developments from Washington. Prior to this role, I served as Legislative Director for Congressman Tom Reed, overseeing his healthcare portfolio, including management of the Diabetes Caucus, which he served as Co-Chair. I worked closely with our local county health departments, hospitals, nursing homes, and hospices during the COVID-19 crisis, ensuring strong coordination of emergency resources. Throughout my career, I've lived by the philosophy that if one wants to go fast, to go alone, but if one wants to go far, to go together. I believe in working together, collaborating, finding common ground, and promoting pragmatic solutions. Most importantly, I'm eager to give back. My wife and I moved to Alexandria in 2021 after living in Arlington for several years. Alexandria has been a welcoming city, and we've fallen in love with it. It would be an honor to be selected to serve on the PHAC and give back to our community. Should you have any questions or wish to discuss my application further, you can reach me at 516-458-3647 or at LoganHoover@gmail.com. Regards, Logan Hoover

I am interested in serving on the Public Health Advisory Committee because I want to put my public health training, social science competencies, equity values, and deep love for Alexandria to constructive use in ensuring that all of my fellow community members have the opportunity to achieve their full health potential. Our community is not immune to the multiple threats to public health facing our country, yet we also have bountiful assets - diversity of cultures and perspectives, elected officials who value science and public health, civically engaged constituents, and a robust network of community resources and allies, to name a few - that I believe position Alexandria as a leading example of what is possible when a community fully harnesses its strengths. I am fully committed to advancing this cause and ready to get to work. It would be my honor to serve along my fellow Alexandria public health champions as a Citizen Member of the Public Health Advisory Committee.

Have you ever served the City of Alexandria in any capacity?

Yes (Please explain), I was a member of the Community Health Assessment Steering Committee in 2018-19. I also served for many years on the Executive Committee of the Cora Kelly Elementary School PTA, including one year as president (2020-21).

Educational Background

I hold a Master of Public Health (MPH) degree from the University of Illinois at Chicago, with a focus in health policy. I completed my undergraduate studies at Indiana University, Bloomington with a BA in psychology. I have taken additional graduate level coursework in research and evaluation methods at the George Washington University for professional development.

Summary of Work and Experience

I have spent nearly 20 years of my professional career in public health adjacent roles spanning social science research, patient advocacy, health systems science, and health policy. For the past 6+ years, I have been a health workforce researcher with the George Washington University (GWU), seeking to understand and explain the relationship between health workforce policies and programs and health equity. In this role, I serve as a principal investigator on numerous research studies, a program evaluator, and project manager with a particular focus on health workforce development strategies to expand and diversify the health professions. Prior to my work with GWU, I worked with a small patient advocacy organization focused on hepatitis C and lung cancer, where I developed a new integrative health care management initiative for individuals living with these health challenges. It was in this role where I learned the term "syndemic", as we advocated for policy action and investments to combat the dual and interconnected public health threats of hepatitis C and the opioid epidemic. I also got a crash course in lung cancer and the unfair stigma that comes along with the diagnosis (an injustice reinforced just this week amidst news that lung cancer screenings are missing far too many). Before, during, and for a period following obtaining my MPH, I worked for 8 years at the Institute for Health Research & Policy at the University of Illinois at Chicago. As a program coordinator, graduate research assistant, and research specialist with the Institute, I helped conduct federally-funded evaluations of youth smoking cessation programs and the only nationwide assessment of school district nutrition and physical activity standards. My skill set spans health services research, qualitative research methods, policy analysis, program evaluation, project management, writing for scientific, policy, and public audiences, and workforce development consulting. Health equity is my professional and personal North Star.
