Statement of Interest (Do not include personal information such as phone numbers, addresses, emails, etc.)
As a first-generation college graduate from a low-income background, I know firsthand how affordable housing and equitable access to resources can transform lives. With double majors in Political Science and Public & Urban Affairs from Virginia Tech and a master's degree in College Student Personnel from Bowling Green State University, I've studied public policy and urban issues academically while also building real-world experience in higher education and corporate settings. In my current role as a Senior Human Resources Associate at Capital One, I manage a business analyst internship program that cultivates talent from diverse backgrounds and focuses on equity and inclusion. I am passionate about making Alexandria a place where individuals and families of all income levels can thrive, and I want to serve on the Housing Affordability Advisory Committee to apply my skills in collaboration, strategic planning, and community engagement to help shape policies that promote stable, affordable housing and create opportunities for generational wealth.

Educational Background

Master of Arts in College Student Personnel, Bowling Green State University (2018). Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and Public & Urban Affairs, Virginia Tech (2016).

Summary of Work and Experience

I currently serve as a Senior Human Resources Associate at Capital One, where I manage the Business Analyst Internship Program and support talent development initiatives across the HR organization. My role involves recruiting, mentoring, and coordinating cross-functional projects to ensure a diverse and equitable talent pipeline. Prior to joining Capital One, I worked in higher education roles focused on student affairs and equity programs, which sharpened my skills in leadership development, program management, and strategic planning. These experiences have prepared me to work collaboratively with stakeholders, analyze policy impacts, and advocate for inclusive practices.
