18	Our very small business is located on the 100 block of King Street. Our classes are of the fitness-type variety but cannot be conducted out front for two reasons: 1. The parking spaces out front are already consumed by the surrounding restaurants. 2. There is way too much evening foot traffic to conduct fitness classes there. We are also so small that we don't have much funding to pay fees beyond what we already pay. However, we can conduct our classes outdoors offsite. We would benefit from a local gazebo, a large one, maybe 25x25, where we could rent a regular weekly time slot at approximately $15/hour. The roof would give us ability to hold classes outdoors throughout the whole year, but the open sides would provide a breeze and comfort. I imagine other small fitness studios would find benefit in the same thing: yoga, martial arts, personal trainers, CrossFit-type businesses. If it were raised up off the ground some, it could also be used for demonstrations, like a small band, a fitness demonstration, a dance routine.....	8/26/2021 8:17 AM

20	Taxpayers have paid for these streets. There should be no such "fee" to convert public space to private space. The pandemic ends; this should end.	8/24/2021 9:03 PM
