Subject: Renaming of the "Braddock Neighborhood Interim Open Space" for Judy Guse-Noritake.

Mr. Browand,

As representatives of the Henry Condominium Association immediately adjacent to the park, we write this letter in support of the application to change the name of the "Braddock Neighborhood Interim Open Space" at 600 North Henry Street to the "Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park." Judy was a mentor, colleague and a friend to many in the neighborhood and the City at large, and was very helpful in bringing together our community with others in the neighborhood in order to activate the Park through neighborhood-facing activities, including Movies and Yoga in the Park.

As one of the founders and the first President of the Braddock Metro Citizens Coalition, Judy helped to act as a voice for the many different kinds of residents in the Braddock neighborhood. She worked with several allied organizations and associations to sponsor events in the park for families and children of all incomes living in the area and led several BMCC meetings in our own building prior to the pandemic.

If you stop by the park and take a look at the grass and the trees, they are healthy and thriving in part because of the many days Judy spent watering when the park first opened, as well as her work to coordinate volunteers to do the same on hot days. She'd often let the neighborhood kids know when the sprinkler would be out, inviting them to play and cool off on a hot summer day, and also asked neighborhood residents to contribute ideas for resources and play items that can still be found for community use under the ping pong tables.

Beyond the immediate impact she had upon our neighborhood in her later years, we appreciate the contribution that her values and influence made to many of the City's approaches to green space, including her consideration of the needs of the community at all income levels through her shepherding of BMCC's partnership with Charles Houston Rec Center amongst others.

THE HENRY

THE UNIT OWNERS' ASSOCIATION OF THE HENRY CONDOMINIUM

We have heard from some of our residents about the impact and legacy Judy has left and support the renaming of the Interim Park in accordance with her memory.

If you have any questions or would like to discuss this matter in further detail, please contact me by email at thehenrygeneralmanager@gmail.com or by phone at 703-739-1525.

Renaming of the “Braddock Neighborhood Interim Open Space”

Mr. Mayor, Ms. Vice-Mayor and City Council:

We write this letter in support of the application to change the name of the “Braddock Neighborhood Interim Open Space” at 600 North Henry Street to the “Judy Guse Noritake Braddock Park.”

Judy was a mentor, a colleague and a friend to many in the neighborhood and the City at large. She had an outsize impact on bringing together people with common interests to conspire in ways that bettered our city.

Judy was a founder of the Braddock Metro Citizens' Coalition, and under Judy's leadership, the BMCC became a voice for public and affordable housing and frequently sponsored events in the park, including movie night, for families and children of all incomes living in the area. If you stop by the park and take a look at the grass and the trees, they are healthy and thriving in part because of the many days Judy spent watering when the park first opened. She'd often let the neighborhood kids know when the sprinkler would be out, inviting them to play and cool off on a hot summer day. Every Halloween, you'd see Judy with a knife through her head handing out candy at the Braddock Lofts candy table on N. Fayette street. She was famously popular with the neighborhood kids, and the adults for that matter!

Her values and influence always considered the needs of the community at all income levels including ensuring that all residents had access to the City's green space. She also saw our city rec centers for the community hubs they are and was a constant advocate for the hard-working staff, as well as for the variety and scope of programming they were able to offer.

If there was a cause that advanced the long-term interest of our community, Judy was not only behind it, she was its most eloquent champion. She embodied the advocacy principle that so much is possible when you stop worrying about who gets the credit. She knew that simply having good arguments was not enough. You needed to also have people want to join your team.

Today, all around our City, Judy leaves a rich legacy of what is possible when you work to bring people together around good ideas. That legacy of parks, good design, diverse neighborhoods and sustainable communities is one that will benefit generations. We can think of no better name for our neighborhood park as the “Judy Guse Noritake Braddock Park.”

Mayor and City Council
 Alexandria, VA 22314

Dear Mr. Mayor and City Council,

I write this letter on behalf of the board of directors and members of the Braddock Lofts Homeowners Association. We are enthusiastically supporting the application to change the name of the "Braddock Neighborhood Interim Open Space" at 600 N Henry St to the "Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park".

Judy was a special friend to the City of Alexandria and the Braddock metro neighborhood. For many years she served in any number of volunteer roles, all focused on the needs of the community at every income level. She was an organizer and influencer for initiatives that bettered the lot of many of our citizens. Just one of many examples of Judy's overriding interest in improving the lives of our citizens, especially children, was the interest she focused on supporting the development and use of our city recreation centers. She was a strong and forceful advocate for these neighborhood hubs and their hard-working staff. She promoted park development of available green space wherever possible, for the same reasons that she saw value in our rec centers. These were places where children and families could relax, play, and come together as a community of good neighbors.

Notably Judy was a founder of the Braddock Metro Citizens' Coalition. Under her leadership, the BMCC was a strong advocate for public and affordable housing and the preservation of green space for citizen enjoyment. Judy was the driving force for the development of the Braddock Neighborhood Interim Open Space Park and helped sponsor many events at this small but wonderful location that combined open green space with bocci ball courts and permanent table tennis and picnic tables. She encouraged neighborhood folks, young and old, to gather at this site that promoted relaxation, sport, and peaceful collegiality among neighbors. I seriously doubt if this tiny park would exist were it not for the leadership that Judy provided in helping the concept and development come together for approval by the city government.

What a wonderful legacy of dedicated, productive service Judy left in the wake of a too short, but very fulfilling life, on behalf of her neighbors and fellow Alexandria citizens. Without a doubt, Judy's effective form of advocacy and practical ideas for improving the living environment for all the citizens of Alexandria and, most especially the Braddock neighborhood, has made this a better place to live, work and play. We believe there is no more appropriate name for our neighborhood park than the Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park.

Jack,

I fully support the renaming of Braddock Interim Park to honor Judy Guse-Noritake.

She was a fierce advocate of recreation and open space in the City and dedicated a great deal of her time in service to her community as a member and chair of the Park and Recreation Commission.

Thank you for your consideration.

Good morning, Jack,

I see from the City website that comments on renaming Braddock Park in honor of Judy Guse-Noritake are to go directly to you.

So, I'll put in my two cents worth and tell you that I very much like Gina's idea that it be named Judy Park. This fits well with Judy's utter lack of desire to bring attention to herself and to work for all the common good. Also, anyone with the name name can feel it is named for them. We need more simplicity in our parks and our lives.

Thank you.

Yvonne

Subject: [EXTERNAL]Support for naming Braddock Interim Park after Judy Noritake

Jack first of all, it's been far too long - I hope you're doing well.

I'm writing to share a quick note of support for the intention to name both the interim, and long-term permanent, Braddock Park after Judy, which, I doubt you find my position surprising! Rather than write something new, I thought what I might do is share the remembrance of Judy that I wrote last year. I think it very much lays out why I'm thrilled to see the city honor her in this way.

"You may not realize it, but if you live in Alexandria your life was touched by Judy Noritake in some meaningful way. Mine more than most.

She died yesterday after a long illness, but her passing still feels impossibly sudden.

It's left me wanting (needing) to share a reflection about the way we show up in our communities and change the lives of others.

Judy served 20 years on the city parks and rec commission, and chaired it for much of that time. She tirelessly fought to create and improve countless open spaces in Alexandria that we all enjoy daily, most notably Four Mile Run park.

She also saw our city rec centers for the community hubs they are and was a constant advocate for the hard-working staff, as well as for the variety and scope of programming they were able to offer.

If you've enjoyed something free and public and fun or enriching in Alexandria, it's likely that Judy laid the groundwork for it somewhere along the way. There's a reason, after all, the city recognized her with the Ellen Pickering award a few years back.

Judy built things. She built parks and outdoor spaces with the city. She built buildings and offices as an architect. And she built networks and communities, this last being her most enduring legacy by far.

When I first moved to Alexandria I was looking to get involved, and on a whim I attended a neighborhood planning meeting. It was boring and picayune (as these things are) but halfway through the meeting a woman slides over to where I was seated by the windows and smiles at me.

She stage whispers "WHO ARE YOU AND WHY ARE YOU HERE"

I didn't really know how to answer that, but that was ok because before I could she whispers again "DON'T LEAVE, I WANT TO TALK TO YOU AFTER."

So I didn't leave. And Judy talked to me after. We went on to found a civic association for our neighborhood together, and I joined that neighborhood planning group and took my own turn on the parks and rec commission.

She introduced me to countless people that became close friends and parts of my daily life. She showed me how to care about a place and how to work to change it for the better. She showed me Alexandria.

What I'm left thinking about, bereft that she's gone, is the incalculable debt I owe to her life-altering interest in a stranger at a public meeting. And how simple it is for each of us to have that impact on someone, how each of us can love the places we live as much as she did.

Judy Noritake loved Alexandria. And we loved her. She built a legacy of people and place that will long outlast her, carried forward one stranger and one smile at a time."

Thanks Jack, and please let me know how I can continue to help and be involved, in any way.

Yours,

Jesse

This is very obviously the correct decision and naming the park after anyone else would be almost insulting to Alexandria and to the memory of Ms. Guse-Noritake. She mentored and inspired at least one of the most experienced and engaged civic advocate so I know of in the city. Please do the right thing.

My only reason to question the decision is to wonder whether she should be honored in some other way as well. I am sure there will be other opportunities.

Dear Mr. Browand,

I'm writing to support recognizing Judy Guse-Noritake's tremendous impact in Alexandria with a park named in her honor. The only part of the proposed park naming I am not delighted about is that Wythe Street Park is interim. Judy's contribution to the city warrant recognition in a permanent space. I served on the park commission just after Judy finished her tenure, but her stewardship and advocacy for Alexandria was impressively apparent. I fully support naming a park space in her honor and hope a more permanent recognition is considered in the future.

Jack -

I hope you're doing well.

I wanted to send in my very strong support for the renaming of the Braddock Interim Park in honor of Judy Guse-Nortike. In addition to the many accolades noted in the email from the city, Judy's life and work before she was active member of the Alexandria community is one that we could all hope to enjoy. Whether it was growing up in Montana, spending time in Alaska (including landing on a glacier), and seeing some of the greast natural wonders of our country, she was a true force. I only got to know this side of Judy once I left public life and it's one that I was blessed to know.

The park naming recognizes Judy's contributions to the larger Alexandria community, but is also a testament to her life as advocate for what the natural world gives us all.

My best you.

Many thanks,

Dear Mr. Browand:

I would like heartily endorse the proposal to name the Braddock Interim Park and the planned future permanent park Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park.

Judy was a mentor, a colleague, and a friend, and had an indelible impact on our community over the years as a community leader and resident of Alexandria.

When I was elected chair of the Waterfront Committee in 2009, Judy was many years into her tenure chairing the Park and Recreation Commission. She and I would regularly meet for lunch and talk about how our two commissions could collaborate to better our waterfront parks and public spaces. Many of the changes today on the waterfront—and in parks throughout the city—are the result of Judy's dedicated service.

Judy was also a founder of the Braddock Metro Citizens' Coalition, a different kind of civic association that actively advocated for an urban, mixed-income, transit-oriented neighborhood near the Metro. Under Judy's leadership, the coalition became a voice for public and affordable housing and frequently sponsored events for families and children of all incomes living in the area. Many of those events were held at Braddock Interim Park, a new model for Alexandria as an active, urban park providing neighborhood-focused open space and recreational opportunities. The park is a manifestation of her, and the coalition's, vision for a vibrant park in the heart of a growing community.

I can think of no more fitting honor than to name this park for Judy, and encourage the Naming Committee and City Council to support this proposal.

Thank you,

Nathan Macek

For Immediate Release: April 21, 2023

The City of Alexandria is soliciting feedback on a proposal to formally name Braddock Interim Park and planned future permanent park Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park. Additional information on the current interim park and proposed future park may be found by visiting the Braddock Metro Neighborhood and Braddock East Master Plans website. The Department of Recreation, Parks & Cultural Activities will receive comments through Sunday, May 7, 2023. Those interested in providing their comments on the proposed name, or other name ideas, can email to Jack.Browand@alexandriava.gov or by mail to RPCA, C/O Jack Browand, 2900-A Business Center Drive, Alexandria VA 22314 through May 7.

The park naming recommendation is based on Judy Guse-Noritake's tireless efforts and invaluable work in the field of environmental policy and advocacy, and as an inspiration for future generations to follow in her footsteps and contribute to the betterment of our environment. Ms. Guse-Noritake, was a longstanding City resident and had 20 years of service on the Park & Recreation Commission, she devoted her life to advocating for environmental causes and championing lasting policies that positively impacted the City, and was directly involved in numerous projects and initiatives that have improved parks and natural spaces. This naming recommendation is supported by the Braddock Lofts Homeowners Association and the Braddock Metro Citizens' Coalition.

Subject: [EXTERNAL]Fwd: City of Alexandria Solicits Feedback for Naming of Braddock Interim Park in Honor of Judy Guse-Noritake

Jack,

I am writing in support of the naming of the Braddock Interim Park and the planned future permanent park to be Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park. Judy was such a force for creating public space for both the City of Alexandria as well as for the Braddock neighborhood in her lifetime. I can speak personally about how she helped create and build community in Braddock through our neighborhood movie nights and other activations in the Interim Park, but her efforts leading the Parks and Rec commission are felt broader across the city and are such a positive influence on our neighborhoods. Thank you for honoring Judy's legacy and renaming the park in her honor.

Best,
Abbey Oklak

Subject: City of Alexandria Solicits Feedback for Naming of Braddock Interim Park in Honor of Judy Guse-Noritake

For Immediate Release: April 21, 2023

The City of Alexandria is soliciting feedback on a proposal to formally name Braddock Interim Park and planned future permanent park Judy Guse-Noritake Braddock Park. Additional information on the current interim park and proposed future park may be found by visiting the Braddock Metro Neighborhood and Braddock East Master Plans website. The Department of Recreation, Parks & Cultural Activities will receive comments through Sunday, May 7, 2023. Those interested in providing their comments on the proposed name, or other name ideas, can email to Jack.Browand@alexandriava.gov or by mail to RPCA, C/O Jack Browand, 2900-A Business Center Drive, Alexandria VA 22314 through May 7.

The park naming recommendation is based on Judy Guse-Noritake's tireless efforts and invaluable work in the field of environmental policy and advocacy, and as an inspiration for future generations to follow in her footsteps and contribute to the betterment of our environment. Ms. Guse-Noritake, was a longstanding City resident and had 20 years of service on the Park & Recreation Commission, she devoted her life to advocating for environmental causes and championing lasting policies that positively impacted the City, and was directly involved in numerous projects and initiatives that have improved parks and natural spaces. This naming recommendation is supported by the Braddock Lofts Homeowners Association and the Braddock Metro Citizens' Coalition.

Jack –

I add my sincere thanks for your assistance in doing something notable for Judy, who certainly deserves a lasting tribute to her efforts to make Braddock a real neighborhood. And if ever there were a park in need of a new name...

Hi Jack,

The new name for Braddock Park is appropriate and much deserved. Judy did so much to guide the planning of Braddock and the park was one of her ideas. This is a great name.

Jack, I wanted to lend my two cents to this wonderful effort to name the Braddock Interim Park after Judy. She worked tirelessly for this city in its efforts to improve our parks and open spaces, especially in the Braddock Metro neighborhood she called home. She also worked to improve the neighborhood in general through her efforts to support smart growth for this community so close to Metro and so in need of revitalization. She along with Salena Zellers helped turn this neighborhood around and bring new vitality and vibrancy for the entire community. She remains sorely missed and naming the park after her will keep her spirit alive.

Thanks, Mary Catherine Gibbs

Too complicated. No one is ever going to remember all those words to identify a park. The sign for/at the park would be overwhelming. Keep it simple--Braddock Park. Her name can be associated with the park in literature.
